Gameplay Mechanics

Player Locomotion:

Movement
Players can navigate the game world using standard movement controls, enabling them to walk, run, and jump freely.

Flight
Players can utilize the flight ability to achieve vertical mobility, allowing them to access elevated areas within the game world.

Wall Climbing
Players can utilize their claws to ascend specific vertical surfaces, such as walls and fences.

Wall Jumps
Players can execute a double jump to ascend vertical surfaces that would otherwise be inaccessible.
Players may initiate a chain of jumps provided there is an adjacent wall to propel themselves from.

Ledges and Planks
Players can traverse certain areas by navigating Ledge and Plank pathways.

Driving
During some sequences, players will have to reach the mission point while driving a car.

Camera
The Over-the-Shoulder free camera exhibits a growing distance from the player character while the player is in a locomotion state, such as running, flying or climbing walls.

Exploration:

Linear Exploration

Explore the Synth-City as the player progresses

Environmental Puzzles

Utilize player abilities and environmental factors to solve puzzles.

Life Force Objects

Definition:

The game world contains dispersed Life Force objects, which, when interacted with, yield players with red orbs.

Jacking In

Definition:

The player can interface with digital systems, enabling teleportation into virtual environments to activate locked access points or manipulate other digital infrastructure.

When it is introduced?

During his escape, the player, incapacitated by Syndicate forces, was introduced to the concept of 'jacking-in' by Anya.

How to Jack-in?

Players will employ a haptic interface to initiate digital world entry, triggering a teleportation sequence upon palm contact.

Player Health

Players have an initial HP of 100, upgradeable to a maximum of 250 upgrading the Exo-Skeleton ability. Enemy strikes result in HP reduction equivalent to the enemy's damage output.

Progression:

Player Progression

As the player advances, they'll unlock new abilities, acquire increasingly powerful suits, and form alliances.

Leveling System

Defeating enemies yields experience points (Red Orbs), which can be used to upgrade abilities, unlocking new and more potent variations. Each upgrade results in a 25% increase in the player's damage output.

> Where to use the Red Orbs?
> Spend them to upgrade any ability in the ability section.

Combat:

Fighting System

Players will participate in combat scenarios involving 10-15 enemy units per wave, systematically defeating each wave using their weapon and ability loadouts.

Targeting System

Players can manually target an enemy by pressing a designated button and switch targets using the left analog stick or mapped button on the keyboard. In the absence of a selected target, the character will automatically engage the nearest enemy upon initiating an attack.

Parrying and Dodging

The player can execute timed input of a designated button to initiate parry or dodge maneuvers, thus evading incoming enemy attacks. While heavy attacks are invulnerable to parries, they can still be dodged. A visual cue, such as a flashing red indicator or a danger symbol above the enemy, precedes every heavy attack, alerting the player to the impending threat.

Combo System/Ranking System

Operating on a letter grade system, which increases as the player uses a continuous stream of varying or difficult techniques, as well as parrying enemy attacks with their own. Each attack adds a certain amount of points to boost the Style gauge. Performing the same moves repeatedly will see diminishing returns on the boost, all but requiring variation in attacks and abilities. Once the gauge fills up, a new Style grade is reached, denoted by a higher letter. The full names for each grade vary between the games, but it always starts with D, and ends with a variation of S. The Stylish Rank at the time of an enemy's death determines how many Red Orbs they will relinquish.

D	C	B	A	S	SS	SSS
Dope	Crazy!	Badassery	Apocalypse	Scorched	Sinfully Savage	Smoking' Sexy Style

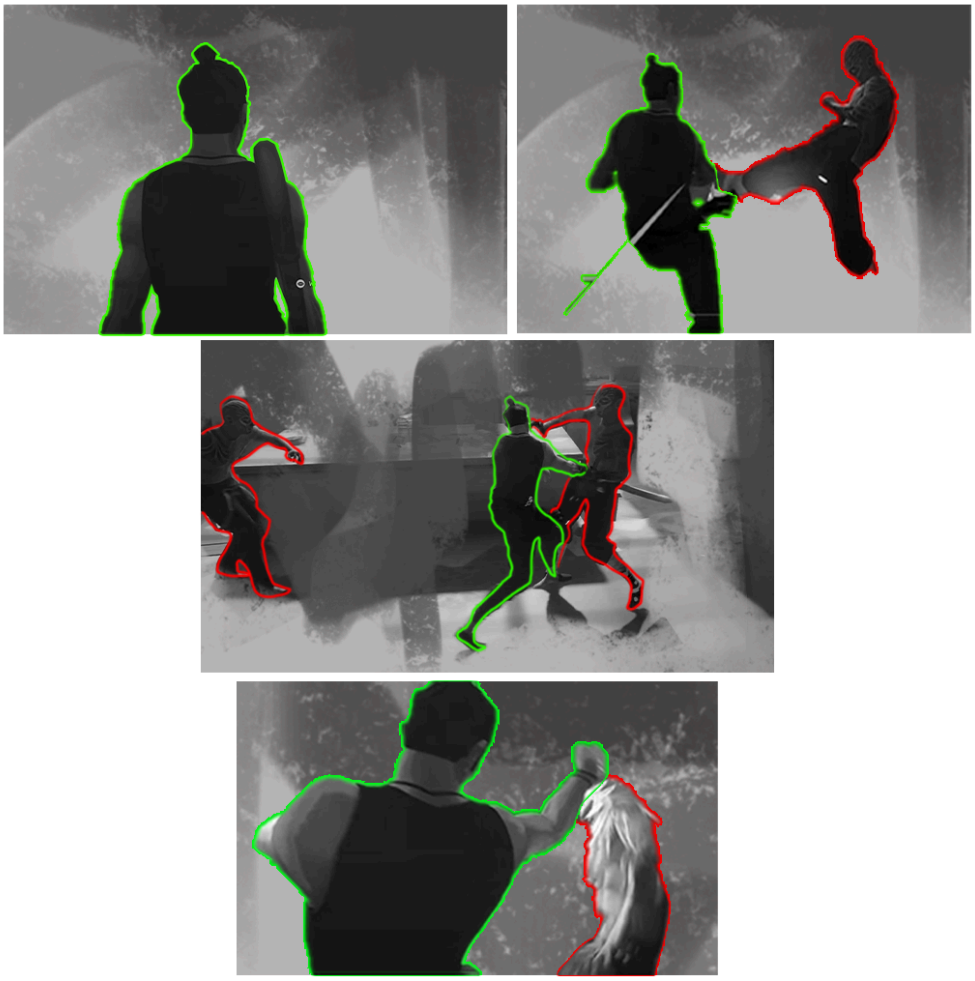
The player's Stylish rank will deplete through inactivity, or by continuously using the same attacks without much variation between them, which will not boost the gauge. The higher the current grade of Style, the faster the gauge will deplete. If struck by an enemy's attack, the Stylish rank is generally greatly affected.

After an enemy's health is diminished their body disintegrates after the player has stopped attacking the enemy. This will help the player to maintain the stylish rank and reach new stylish ranks.

Camera

The camera dynamically transitions between a third-person over-the-shoulder perspective and a cinematic, dynamic camera angle during combat encounters, culminating in a visually striking cinematic camera angle during special attack executions. When an enemy is locked on the camera gets mainly focused onto the enemy during combat.



Player Abilities

Abilities are special, time-limited powers that the player can utilize during gameplay. These abilities are governed by an ability meter, which depletes as the ability is activated.

Characters

Levi:

The Main Protagonist and Playable Character.

Appearance
Levi is a young man in his late 20s with a rugged, streetwise appearance that reflects his hard-working life in Synth-City. He has a lean but muscular build, shaped by the physical demands of his delivery job and later enhanced by his powers. His skin is slightly tanned from long nights on the city streets, and he has a few faint scars from past encounters with thugs, hinting at his tough resilience.

He has short, dark, slightly messy hair that's usually swept back, revealing intense, dark eyes that hold a quiet determination. Levi's features are sharp and defined, with a strong jawline and a faint shadow of stubble that he rarely bothers to shave completely. He has a faint, thoughtful frown as if always calculating his next move.

After his transformation, Levi's appearance subtly reflects his newfound powers. His eyes occasionally flicker with a faint golden glow when he activates his abilities, and when his wings manifest, they appear as translucent, energy-laced structures—delicate yet powerful, like a bee's wings but more ethereal, shimmering with a hint of electric gold.

Outfits

1. Delivery Guy
In his delivery outfit, Levi has a functional yet worn look, fitting the dystopian vibe of Synth-City. His uniform is a tough, black and gray utility jacket with several pockets and straps, worn over a dark, long-sleeve T-shirt that is visibly faded from years of night shifts. The jacket bears the logo of the low-budget delivery company he works for, though it's partially peeled and scratched—a testament to both his long hours on the job and the harsh environment of Synth-City.

The jacket has reflective strips along the shoulders and sleeves, necessary for navigating the city's neon-lit but shadowy streets. There's a small, embedded LED badge on his chest, marking him as a verified worker, which flickers erratically from overuse. Underneath, his pants are dark cargo style, with reinforced padding around the knees and shins to withstand the rough terrain of abandoned districts and industrial zones. His boots are sturdy, scuffed, and made from synthetic materials designed to last; they're equipped with small, retractable cleats for better grip in uneven areas.

Levi's delivery outfit has a few low-end cybernetic enhancements built-in, like fingerless gloves with embedded controls that link to his small delivery hover-bike, allowing him to check routes and scan packages directly from his hands. His right arm has a minor augmentation: a cybernetic brace that helps him handle heavy loads. The brace is visible as a metallic exoskeleton overlay with cables and thin hydraulic joints snaking around his wrist and forearm. It's a cheap, basic model that hums when he moves, occasionally sparking or locking up—a reminder of the technology's wear.

Levi's neck has a small, implant jack just behind his ear, which allows him to access city maps and communication channels directly. A thin, neon-blue line runs from the jack to his eye, connecting to a basic visual enhancement implant in his left iris. This implant is crude, only allowing minimal visual aid for navigation in low light. It occasionally glitches, giving his eye a faint, flickering glow.

In his delivery outfit, Levi looks like someone who's part of the city's struggling working class—resourceful and tough, blending into Synth-City's gritty, cyber-enhanced world yet carrying an aura of resilience and determination.

2. Casual Clothing
   At home, Levi's look is far more relaxed and comfortable, a stark contrast to the rugged delivery outfit he wears on the job. He opts for a simple black or charcoal-gray tank top, showing the toned build he's gained from years of hard physical work. His right arm still has the metal brace attached, an augmentation he can't easily remove, so it's always there, even in his downtime—a reminder of the cybernetic additions that have become part of him. The metal exoskeleton over his arm has a few scratches and dents, making it look weathered and lived-in.

   Levi's pants are worn, loose-fitting sweatpants or dark joggers, fraying at the hems but comfortable. They're the kind of clothing he can relax in but still move around easily when he needs to handle household chores or, as is often the case, protect his younger sister, Chloe. His shoes are old and well-worn, often left off in favor of being barefoot or in simple socks at home, though he'll quickly throw on his shoes if there's an urgent situation outside.

   Levi's cybernetic jack behind his ear is always visible, and the faint neon-blue line along his neck gives a subtle glow, though it's dimmer indoors. At home, he often lets his hair down from its usual work-ready state, revealing thick, slightly messy, wavy dark hair that gives him a more approachable and casual look. His face is shadowed with a light stubble, adding to the impression of someone who doesn't always have time to worry about appearance.

3. Suit gifted by The Keeper
   In the suit gifted by the Keeper, Levi has an otherworldly, powerful presence that fully marks his transformation into a Guardian. The suit is a sleek, dark metallic black with deep amber accents, designed to look both futuristic and primal, like armor crafted from ancient technology. The suit hugs his muscular frame, with high-tech plating over his chest, shoulders, and thighs, giving him a form-fitting, yet protective look.

   The chest piece bears a subtle, iridescent emblem of a bee, almost hidden but visible when the light catches it just right, symbolizing his bond with his new powers. Across the suit, faintly glowing golden lines pulse with energy, mimicking the look of veins in a beehive structure. These veins channel energy from his core to his limbs, enhancing his speed, strength, and reflexes in combat.

   Levi's right arm, the one with the cybernetic brace, is now encased in reinforced armor that integrates with his existing cybernetics, upgrading them and lending his punches an added shockwave effect. His hands are gloved, with the gloves featuring a honeycomb grip pattern for superior hold in battle. On the knuckles, small energy modules glow softly, capable of charging his punches with venomous energy stingers, making him dangerous up close.

   Levi's wings are an impressive feature that materialize at will, springing from his back with a fluid, almost organic motion. They are a golden-black combination of energy and metallic structure, sleek and shimmering with hexagonal patterns resembling a bee's wings. The wings extend fully when needed, unfurling with a graceful yet powerful sweep, allowing him to glide or soar with precision.

   His helmet is a streamlined piece that covers his head and connects seamlessly to the suit. A visor extends over his eyes, tinting his view in golden hues while displaying tactical information. The helmet can retract when he needs to reveal his face, breaking down into panels that rest around his neck, resembling a collar. When the helmet is engaged, two sharp antenna-like projections extend from above his forehead, giving him a distinct, bee-like silhouette that sets him apart as the Guardian.

   Levi's entire demeanor changes in this suit. His usually guarded, slightly weary look becomes focused and determined, with an intense golden glow in his eyes that signifies his newfound power. He stands taller, exuding the confidence and presence of a warrior chosen to defend against the darkness threatening his world.

4. Suit modified by Anya

The modified suit, tailored by Anya, is designed with stealth and agility in mind, reflecting the need for Levi to infiltrate dangerous areas without detection. The fabric is a sleek, matte black, absorbing light and blending seamlessly with the shadows, almost like a second skin. The material is reinforced with a flexible but durable weave, offering protection without sacrificing mobility.

The suit's design is minimalist but tactical, with carefully placed panels of dark, almost indiscernible armor on the chest, shoulders, and shins. These plates provide subtle protection while remaining lightweight. The armor has a matte, non-reflective surface, ensuring Levi stays hidden in the darkness. The amber accents from his original suit are now dimmed, integrated as low-profile lines running along his arms and legs, still hinting at the energy coursing through him, but without the striking glow of his Guardian suit.

The most notable change is the addition of a full-body stealth cloak, which attaches to the back of the suit, allowing him to blend in completely with his surroundings. When Levi doesn't need it, the cloak retracts neatly into his suit. The wings are also reworked for stealth, with a more compact, almost translucent design, allowing them to fold seamlessly into the suit's back when not in use, and when materialized, they take on a darker, shadowy form, giving them an almost ethereal quality.

His visor has been replaced with a more advanced, sleek helmet, designed for low visibility and minimal interference while still providing critical data. The helmet's faceplate is nearly invisible, giving it a holographic sheen that looks like a shadowed mask. This modification ensures Levi can maneuver through dangerous territory without being detected while still being able to access the full range of his powers. The suit is the perfect blend of his Guardian abilities and Anya's tech, making Levi a ghost in the night.

Chloe:

Levi's beloved sister.

Appearance

Chloe is a teen age girl and has a youthful, energetic appearance, a stark contrast to the dark and harsh world of Synth-City. She stands at an average height for her age, with a slim, athletic build that speaks to her resourcefulness and ability to stay on her toes in the dangerous city. Her hair is a messy, wavy brown, cut to about shoulder-length, often tied in a loose ponytail or left to fall freely around her face, giving her a carefree look. Her sharp, expressive eyes are a warm brown, always filled with curiosity and a hint of mischief, which can quickly turn to worry when it comes to her brother's safety.

Chloe's casual clothing reflects the utilitarian style of the dystopian world. She typically wears a simple, form-fitting hoodie or jacket layered over a loose, faded shirt, paired with ripped, durable pants or leggings. Her shoes are sturdy boots, practical for navigating the gritty streets of Synth-City, while a few small accessories like a worn-out scarf or bracelet add a personal touch.

In this world of cybernetic enhancements, Chloe is still unmodified, retaining a more human look compared to the many augmented citizens around her. Her skin is fair, with a few faint freckles across her cheeks and nose, and her expressions are always full of life, often animated by her protective love for Levi and her natural curiosity about the world. Despite the harshness of their lives, there's an innocence about Chloe that gives her a distinct warmth in a city full of cold technology.

Anya:

A skilled hacker who becomes Levi's ally.

Appearance
Anya, in her late 20s, embodies a rebellious yet pragmatic edge. Her appearance is sharp and confident, reflecting her independent, no-nonsense attitude.

She wears a half-fitted jacket, the kind that's both stylish and functional in the dystopian world, with a sleek, modern design. The jacket has a worn, slightly weathered look, hinting at the tough times she's lived through. It hugs her figure tightly around her shoulders and chest, but as it tapers down, it opens up slightly at the waist, leaving her midriff visible. This design choice complements her rebellious personality while also giving a sense of freedom and agility.

Her waist is adorned with visible tattoos—intricate, dark designs that snake across her skin, adding to her fierce aesthetic. The tattoos could be a mix of symbolic imagery, representing personal milestones or affiliations, with bold lines and sharp angles, evoking a sense of power and individuality. Some tattoos may peek out from under the edges of her jacket, creating a layered effect.

Anya's arms, also covered in tattoos, tell stories of struggle and survival. The tattoos are artfully done, some abstract, others more graphic or tribal, with a hint of color that pops against her otherwise dark clothing.

Her face is strong, with sharp cheekbones and piercing eyes. Her expression is usually intense, yet her lips have a slight curve, showing she's not devoid of warmth or humor. Her long hair is often tied back in a messy but controlled ponytail, with strands of hair loosely framing her face. It gives her a gritty, utilitarian look, one that fits her role as a hacker and resistance fighter.

Her attire and physical features convey a woman who has embraced the harsh realities of Synth-City but hasn't lost her sense of style or identity in the process.

Anya exudes confidence, independence, and an underlying fierceness that would make her an invaluable ally to Levi and anyone else who fights for the same cause.

Rohit:

A street-smart Indian man who joins Levi's team and a Playable Character

Appearance

Rohit has a street-smart, rugged appearance that blends his urban upbringing with his cybernetic enhancements. Standing at a lean but athletic build, his posture is confident, exuding an energy of constant motion and readiness. His skin is a warm brown tone, often marked with dirt or smudges from his adventures through the streets of the dystopian world.

His hair is dark and messy, tied back into a samurai knot at the nape of his neck, giving him a tough yet disciplined look. His expressive dark eyes are full of mischief and intelligence, and his gaze has the sharpness of someone who's always thinking a few steps ahead. A mischievous grin often plays at the corner of his lips, hinting at his playful yet fearless personality.

Outfit

1. Street

Rohit wears a practical, casual outfit suited for quick movements and survival in the harsh, dystopian environment. His loose-fitting clothes are a mix of worn-in fabric and durable materials—think baggy cargo pants that are slightly faded with a well-used look. The pants are equipped with multiple pockets, holding tools and equipment, and the hems are often rolled up or slightly tattered at the ends. A fitted, sleeveless hoodie or tank top completes his look, with some parts of the fabric showing wear and tear. The clothing is clearly meant for function over form, providing freedom of movement while looking a little scruffy from constant use.

On his head, he wears a simple beanie or a bandana, often slung loosely over his forehead or pulled down low to shield his eyes from the harsh sunlight. His signature knife, always on hand, is holstered at his waist or strapped to his leg, ready to be drawn if needed.

His cybernetic legs are the most striking feature of his appearance. The exoskeletons along his thighs and calves are sleek and futuristic, with a metallic, smooth finish. The joints of his legs move fluidly, almost like a second set of limbs—silent and precise. Small glowing accents run along the side of the implants, pulsing softly when he's using his enhanced abilities, but they don't detract from his overall rugged look. His feet are equipped with special grip tech, making him capable of scaling walls or performing jumps that would seem impossible to an unmodified human.

Rohit’s body language reflects his sharp instincts and readiness for anything, from sprinting across rooftops to engaging in close combat. He may look like just another street kid, but his enhancements and survival skills make him a force to be reckoned with.

2. Modified Suit
   When Rohit wears the suit modified by Anya, his appearance shifts from the scrappy street-smart image to something more sleek and tactical, though still retaining his rugged edge. The suit fits his body like a second skin, enhancing both his agility and his raw physicality while giving him a more streamlined, powerful silhouette.

   The suit is a dark, matte color with accents of deep red or metallic details that match his enhanced cybernetics. It’s designed to accommodate his modified legs, with sleek panels that wrap around his thighs and calves, offering a blend of protection and flexibility. The fabric of the suit is lightweight yet durable, allowing for maximum movement during parkour stunts and combat situations. There are sections along the joints where the suit molds to the contours of his enhanced limbs, giving them a more seamless, fluid appearance. The glowing lines that run along the cybernetic implants on his legs are subtly integrated into the suit’s design, with the glow intensifying during physical exertion or when his enhancements are in full use.

   The torso of the suit is equipped with reinforced padding, offering protection without hindering his movement, and it hugs his lean, athletic build, emphasizing his muscularity. The upper part of the suit includes a high-collared jacket or a tactical vest with secure straps for utility, allowing Rohit to carry tools and gear essential for his survival. The jacket has built-in compartments that seem to mold into his frame without creating bulk.

   His arms are similarly protected, with armored sleeves or gauntlets that provide defense but still allow for quick, fluid motion. His tattoos on his arms and waist, previously visible in his casual wear, now peek through the suit's openings or are subtly accentuated by the suit’s design, adding a personal touch to his otherwise combat-ready appearance.

   Rohit's face remains partially exposed, but the suit's design incorporates a mask or goggles that can be pulled down or adjusted depending on the situation. These offer additional protection and scanning capabilities, though his expression is still visible when needed, allowing his mischievous grin and sharp eyes to shine through.

   With the suit modified by Anya, Rohit looks like a deadly, efficient warrior, blending street tactics with advanced cybernetic upgrades. His look is sharp, tactical, and futuristic, yet still grounded in his gritty, urban roots. The combination of enhanced technology and street-savvy flair makes him look both formidable and untouchable, ready to take on anything the dystopian world throws his way.

The Keeper:

An ancient and mysterious figure who guides Levi.

Appearance

The Keeper is a striking, ethereal presence, a tall and otherworldly woman whose very appearance seems to transcend the confines of the dystopian world she inhabits. She stands at an impressive height, exuding an air of ancient wisdom and quiet power, as though she were part of the forgotten past, yet still very much alive in the present.

Her long, flowing white hair cascades down her back like a river of light, almost luminous against the darker, more grim surroundings of the world. The hair moves with a life of its own, as if it were part of her essence, swirling and shifting in response to her emotions or the environment around her. Her face is sharp and regal, with high cheekbones and a calm, almost serene expression that suggests she is both a figure of authority and a guardian of hidden knowledge.

Her eyes, however, are perhaps the most captivating feature. They are a deep, otherworldly shade—like silver-gray or ice-blue—that seems to pierce into the soul. When she gazes at you, it's as though she can see far beyond the present, into the past and future alike, making her seem both distant and profoundly connected to the world around her.

The Keeper wears a flowing, form-fitting robe made of a material that glows faintly, as though infused with energy from another plane. The robe has an almost translucent quality, shifting between shades of pale silver, white, and iridescent hues, giving her an ethereal and somewhat ghostly appearance. The fabric drapes elegantly around her figure, yet moves with a fluid grace, almost like it’s alive, responding to her every movement as though it were a part of her own body.

Around her neck, she wears a simple yet striking necklace, perhaps made of an ancient, mysterious artifact, symbolizing her status and her connection to the secrets she guards. Her hands are often delicate yet firm, with fingers that seem to glow faintly with power, suggesting she can manipulate forces that ordinary humans cannot fathom.

Her presence is both calming and intimidating, as she holds an unspoken authority over those who encounter her. Though she may seem fragile, there is a quiet strength in her aura that commands respect and reverence. The Keeper is both protector and enigma, a figure shrouded in mystery, carrying the weight of forgotten wisdom, and holding the balance of the world in her hands.

The Hornet:

A powerful villain and the main Antagonist who seeks to destroy The Pillar of Forever and control the World. A Playable Character.

Appearance

1. Hornet
   The Hornet is a grotesque abomination, a nightmare that seems to transcend both human and monstrous boundaries. His towering frame is cloaked in corrupted, jagged armor that appears to have been painfully grafted into his body. The armor's edges are torn and twisted, as though they were fused by some violent, unnatural force, leaving his skin mottled with deep, seeping scars. Blackened metal and charred flesh mix together in a hideous patchwork of burnt and raw, creating an appearance of something that has been both broken and remade—warped beyond recognition.

   His face is an unsettling patchwork of flesh and remnants of a mask. The left side is almost entirely obscured by a warped, decaying half-mask that has been grafted into his skin. The metal has been melted and fused in such a way that the jagged edges now penetrate the raw tissue of his face, tearing through skin and muscle. His left eye is half-sunken, a dark, hollow pit where only a sickening black void resides, as though his eye socket was emptied, leaving only the hollowed remnants of a human face. The right side of his face, while more exposed, is no less disturbing—his skin there is unnaturally smooth, stretched thin over his skull, devoid of any humanity. His lips are pulled into a permanent sneer, twisted and frozen in place, showing sharp, broken teeth that look as though they were once human but have now been warped into something alien.

   The Hornet's left arm is his most horrifying feature. It is grotesquely swollen, the skin stretched tight over veins that pulse with unnatural energy. The fingers are elongated into nightmarish claws, sharp and jagged like predatory insects, each talon twitching with a terrifying life of its own. The skin on his arm appears to be permanently scorched, the darkened flesh creeping up toward the shoulder where it meets an arm that has been twisted beyond recognition. His hand, once human, now looks like the appendage of some ancient, monstrous creature. The veins on his arm are thick and black, throbbing with malevolent energy. It is a weapon of death, capable of disintegrating anything it touches, reducing living flesh to dust in a single, sickening contact. The arm seems to hum with a vile energy, as if the very touch of it is capable of spreading decay.

   The Hornet's wings are a disturbing extension of his monstrosity. They unfold from his back with a sickening, grinding sound, a buzz reminiscent of the worst kind of insect swarm. The wings are huge, made of broken, jagged metal and torn flesh, with their edges covered in serrated, almost needle-like protrusions. They twitch and jerk with unnatural, insect-like movements, their membrane-like surface shimmering with a sickly iridescent glow. The wings themselves seem to carry a stench of decay, like the foul, putrid air that follows a swarm of insects feeding on rotting flesh. They are not just appendages—they are weapons, capable of shredding anything in their path. Each beat of the wings sends an air of suffocating malice, creating a storm of twisted wind and a suffocating pressure that weighs on the soul. The sound they make is like a swarm of hornets, a relentless, buzzing hum that sends chills down the spine.

The Hornet's entire presence is suffocating—his very form is an abomination of both man and nightmare, a figure born from the intersection of violence, death, and corruption. Every part of him is warped, melted, and twisted, as if the essence of his humanity was corrupted beyond repair. The way his body moves is unnatural, as if his bones no longer obey human laws of motion, and his very skin seems to ripple with the energy of something far darker than any living creature. His every motion radiates a vile, corrupting force, and his mere existence feels like an assault on the very concept of life. He is no longer a man—he is a grotesque, monstrous entity that defies all natural laws, a living nightmare whose very presence evokes nothing but terror and revulsion.

2. Titus Valen

   Eons ago, the Hornet was a noble guardian, towering and majestic, with radiant armor of gold and silver adorned with intricate engravings. His face, partially covered by a simple mask, radiated serenity, with piercing amber eyes reflecting wisdom. His long dark hair framed his features, and a crown-like structure atop his head symbolized his sacred duty.

   His wings were vast, graceful, and iridescent, shimmering like dawn and dusk, embodying his connection to the heavens and earth. He carried no weapon, for his very presence was a shield, with a staff made from the heart of the sacred Rock by his side.

   In this form, he was a symbol of balance and order, a protector ensuring the safety of The Pillar, radiating peace and divine power. The world around him settled in harmony, and his wings spread wide in silent vigilance.

Viper:

Viper is a cunning and ruthless corporate executive who heads a powerful conglomerate involved in cybernetic technology and weapons manufacturing. She uses her position to amass wealth and influence, and she is not afraid to resort to unethical means to achieve her goals.

Viper's gang is known as The Syndicate. They are a highly organized group of cybernetically enhanced mercenaries and hackers who are willing to do anything for a price. The Syndicate operates in the shadows, controlling the flow of information and technology in the city.

Appearance

Viper is a striking, tall woman with a lithe, slender build that exudes an aura of both elegance and danger. Her long, flowing black hair cascades down her back in sleek waves, the color contrasting sharply against her pale, almost porcelain skin. There is a cool, detached beauty to her features, but her cold, piercing blue eyes are what truly captivate—sharp, calculating, and seemingly devoid of warmth. These eyes hide the deadly precision of her implants and the venomous power that flows through her veins.

Her most distinguishing feature is the network of cybernetic enhancements subtly integrated beneath her skin. Thin, metallic tendrils of cybernetic veins snake across her forearms, spine, and around her neck, glowing faintly with an eerie greenish hue. These implants are the source of her deadly venom, allowing her to produce and control toxins with terrifying efficiency. The veins shimmer beneath her skin, betraying the immense power contained within her cybernetic systems.

Her suit is a sleek, form-fitting black bodysuit that enhances her already dangerous curves, designed both for agility and protection. The fabric is woven with reactive fibers that adjust to her movements, allowing her to blend seamlessly into her environment or spring into action with precision. It's tailored to fit her like a second skin, accentuating her lithe physique while providing the perfect combination of flexibility and defense. Her boots and gloves are reinforced with adaptive materials, ensuring they can withstand the immense pressure and strain her implants endure when activating her venomous powers.

At the tips of her fingers, retractable, needle-like appendages emerge, made of a durable yet flexible alloy. These sharp, deadly needles can pierce the skin of her victims with ease, injecting venom directly into their bloodstream. The venom, enhanced by her cybernetic systems, has the power to paralyze, induce excruciating pain, or even cause rapid cellular breakdown. Her fingers are capable of manipulating the venom in subtle ways, directing it to wherever it's needed with pinpoint accuracy.

Her eyes, now enhanced with microscopic sensors and receptors, allow her to track toxins in the environment, read the flow of energy in her surroundings, and even gauge the strength of her venom. When she’s preparing to strike, her pupils constrict, glowing faintly with a venomous green hue, signaling the immense charge within her.

Viper is a walking weapon—part human, part machine—her appearance a perfect blend of elegance, cold beauty, and lethal force. With every move, she is a reminder of the fearsome power she possesses, a master of her venomous abilities and a force to be reckoned with.

Scorpion:

Scorpion is the leader of the Razorbacks, a violent gang that controls a large territory in the city. He is a ruthless and brutal man who is not afraid to use violence to get what he wants. Scorpion and his gang are involved in a variety of illegal activities, including drug trafficking, extortion, and human trafficking.

Appearance

Scorpion is a formidable, imposing figure with a robust, muscular build honed by years of combat and survival. His skin has a deep, weathered tan, a testament to a life spent enduring harsh elements and brutal conditions. His face is rugged, marked by scars and a fierce expression, with eyes that glint with an intense, unyielding resolve. His short, cropped black hair and a prominent, jagged scar that runs from his left brow down to his jawline give him an appearance as sharp as his attitude.

Scorpion's cybernetic enhancements are centered on his arms and spine, each carefully crafted for powerful strikes and deadly precision. His left arm is fully cybernetic, a sleek, reinforced prosthetic with hidden compartments for retractable blades and a harpoon-like claw attachment. The arm's segmented plates are matte black, with dark orange lines pulsing with energy beneath, giving it a scorpion-like aesthetic. The clawed mechanism can extend and retract rapidly, allowing him to capture targets or pull himself quickly across spaces—a deadly tool for combat or stealth.

A streamlined exoskeleton is attached along his spine, fortified with mechanical nodes that enhance his agility and strength, enabling him to take powerful leaps and survive heavy impacts. His cybernetic enhancements also include retractable talon-like hooks at his fingertips, useful for scaling surfaces or delivering devastating slashes in close-quarters combat.

His outfit consists of a tactical, dark, desert-inspired bodysuit designed for both flexibility and protection, with armored segments over his chest, shoulders, and legs. A deep hood covers his head and neck, casting shadows over his face, and a dark cowl conceals part of his mouth, giving him an even more mysterious, fearsome presence. His boots are reinforced with shock-absorbing materials, allowing him to land silently or withstand long drops, while his gloves contain sensory nodes that allow him to detect even the faintest vibrations around him.

The finishing touch is a glistening black scorpion emblem emblazoned across his chest plate, stylized to look as if it's poised to strike. This emblem not only serves as a reminder of his deadly nature but also strikes fear into those who know of his reputation—a living weapon and a master of ambushes, stealth, and lethal strikes. With every move, Scorpion exudes power and precision, a relentless force lurking in the shadows, ready to attack with swift, merciless accuracy.

Mantis:

Mantis is a mysterious criminal mastermind who operates from the shadows. She is known for her intelligence and her ability to manipulate people and events. Mantis is the leader of The Shadows, a highly secretive organization that is involved in a variety of illegal activities, including espionage, sabotage, and terrorism.

Appearance

Mantis is a lithe, agile figure with a slight frame and an eerie grace to her movements, almost as if she's gliding rather than walking. She has a unique beauty, marked by a haunting, pale green hue to her skin, giving her an almost otherworldly appearance. Her face is strikingly sharp, with high cheekbones, slightly slanted eyes, and an intense, penetrating gaze that seems to analyze every detail around her. Her eyes are an unsettling shade of metallic silver with narrow pupils, enhancing her predatory aura.

Her hair is dark and slick, with thin strands that fall around her face, often tied back or braided to keep it out of the way during her movements. Mantis's appearance is meant to be both intimidating and stealthy, a balance that reflects her role as a skilled and calculating assassin.

Mantis's cybernetic implants are integrated with her nervous system, giving her heightened reflexes, incredible agility, and enhanced precision. Her limbs are reinforced with slender, almost insect-like extensions that allow her to grip walls or hang from surfaces effortlessly, much like the limbs of her namesake. Her fingers are equipped with retractable, needle-like claws laced with a potent venom, giving her deadly tools for close combat. Each joint of her cybernetic implants emits a faint green glow, furthering her ethereal, predatory aesthetic.

She wears a sleek, fitted bodysuit in shades of dark green and matte black, with hexagonal patterns on the chest and legs that provide light armor while allowing her full range of motion. This suit is tailored with tactical pockets and small storage compartments for various tools and toxins she carries, enabling her to deploy traps or poisons quickly. Her gloves are fitted with sensory-enhancing pads, allowing her to detect the slightest vibrations or changes in air pressure, making her impossible to sneak up on and difficult to evade.

Over her bodysuit, Mantis has a flowing cloak that resembles the forelimbs of a praying mantis when extended—an eerie sight that serves as both camouflage and an intimidation tactic. The cloak is designed to be retractable, wrapping around her arms when she needs to move more freely. Her legs are augmented to perform agile leaps and rapid dashes, allowing her to close distances or escape in seconds.

With her silent movements and venomous enhancements, Mantis embodies the lethal precision and grace of her insect namesake—a patient, deadly hunter who is both beautiful and utterly terrifying.

Chapter 3 (A fallen Guardian)

Level 1

Cutscene:
The scene begins in the present, with an ordinary, modern-day setting filled with familiar sounds and surroundings. Gradually, the surroundings start to blur, colors shifting from muted grays and blues to warm tones of gold and amber. Time itself seems to ripple as the air thickens, charged with ancient energy, and everything around fades into a mist that grows denser by the second.
The scene reveals Titus standing at the edge of a cliff, overlooking his domain, vigilant and unwavering. Beside him, the Keeper appears, her presence both protective and commanding, as she bestows upon Titus the title of Guardian of The Pillar of Forever. This eons-old bond between warrior and protector is sealed in silence as they stand side by side, their gaze set firmly on the horizon.

Playable Character: Titus Valen

Task: Become the Guardian
1. Eliminate threats.
2. Earn trust of the elders and other guardians.

Dialogue:

Action: Fight for survival

Environment:
1. Rock of Eternity eons ago: The Pillar of Forever was a towering, otherworldly structure, glowing with celestial energy and surrounded by swirling cosmic winds. Its walls were made of shimmering stone, reflecting the infinite dimensions around it, with endless corridors leading to the very heart of the multiverse.

1. Titus Valen stood before the Council of Elders and Guardians, their eyes filled with skepticism. His appointment as the Guardian of The Pillar of Forever was questioned, his abilities doubted. But as time passed, his protective nature and immense strength proved undeniable. With each challenge, Titus earned their trust and respect, until finally, the Elders bowed in acknowledgment of his rightful place as the protector of The Pillar, his bond with its power solidified.

Level 2

Cutscene:
1. As the years passed, the power of The Pillar of Forever began to take its toll on Titus. What started as a noble commitment to protect soon twisted into something darker. The once honorable Guardian, driven by his growing connection to The Pillar, began to crave more—more power, more control. His protective instincts faded, replaced by an insatiable lust for dominance. The Pillar's immense energy gnawed at him, corrupting his soul, turning him from a protector into a tyrant, as he sought to bend the world to his will.

Titus, consumed by his desire for dominance, no longer saw The Pillar of Forever as a force for balance. To him, it was simply a tool, one that restricted the full extent of his power. The realization struck him like a thunderbolt—if he could seize The Pillar's full potential, there would be nothing left to stand in his way.

Blinded by his ambition, he turned against those who had once trusted him. In a desperate bid for ultimate power, Titus challenged the Keeper and the other Guardians. The air crackled with tension as he clashed with his former allies in a fierce, earth-shaking battle. The Pillar itself seemed to tremble as the Guardian-turned-tyrant fought to break free from the chains he had once sworn to protect.

Playable Character: Titus Valen

Task: Become The Hornet

1. Destroy everything

Dialogue:

Action: Fight for power

Environment:

Cutscene:

1. Titus was ultimately defeated, his once-unstoppable power stripped away. The Keeper and the remaining Guardians stood over him, their weapons raised as he was exiled from The Pillar of Forever. But in a fit of rage and spite, Titus lashed out, slaying the other Guardians in cold blood. With their deaths, he destroyed their sacred relics, erasing the very symbols of their power.

   Yet, despite his fall, Titus was not truly vanquished. Consumed by bitterness, his mind became twisted by hatred. Alone and broken, he scoured the world for forbidden knowledge. Using ancient technology and remnants of his former abilities, he resurrected himself—not as the warrior he once was, but as the Hornet, a monstrous, vengeful being, bent on destroying everything that once held him back. His mind, now fractured and consumed by his lust for revenge, sought only one goal: to reclaim the power of The Pillar and destroy those who had betrayed him.
2. As the vision of the past fades, the present reality snaps back into focus. Levi stands in Anya's hideout, the weight of the Keeper's words lingering in the air. The room is dimly lit, the low hum of machinery filling the silence. His mind races, trying to piece together the connection between the Hornet, the Scorpion, and the events unfolding around him.

The Keeper's voice echoes in his thoughts, the mystery of the Hornet's manipulations still unresolved. The image of the ancient, twisted warrior lingers, a shadow over Levi's thoughts.

Suddenly, the sound of a distant alarm rips through the air, pulling Levi out of his reverie. The danger is far from over. With a renewed sense of urgency, he turns to Anya and Rohit, his resolve hardening. The battle for control of The Pillar of Forever is only beginning, and the stakes are higher than ever.

Level 3

Cutscene:

1. Anya's research had uncovered a lead: a person with known ties to the Hornet, hiding out in a luxurious penthouse in Synth-City's affluent eastern district. But the penthouse was no ordinary residence. Its security was tight—layers of cutting-edge surveillance systems and elite, cyber-enhanced mercenaries guarded the target, making infiltration a near-impossible task.

   Rohit, ever the strategist, suggested a nighttime operation, leveraging the cover of darkness to slip past the defenses. Everyone agreed; however, there was a problem. Levi's suit, designed for power and protection, was anything but subtle, ill-suited for the delicate stealth required.

   Anya, quick to adapt, offered to modify Levi's suit for the mission. Yet, to make the changes, she needed specific components—specialized cloaking tech found only in the suits of the Shadows, a secretive organization shrouded in mystery. Known for their stealth and secrecy, the Shadows operated unseen, their members blending into the dark underbelly of Synth-City, their suits crafted to reflect their silent, elusive presence.

   Anya, her gaze sharp, revealed that members of the Shadows had been watching them ever since Levi's raid on the Syndicate headquarters. She pointed to a monitor, showing blurry, distant figures stationed outside, keeping a constant vigil. "They're out there," she assured them, "but my tech keeps us hidden—they can't hear or see us inside."

   With the Shadows' exact positions marked, Levi and Rohit sprang into action. In a swift, coordinated move, they launched their attack. The two crashed through the window, the glass shattering around them as they leaped into the night air. The Shadows had no time to react as Levi and Rohit descended, the element of surprise giving them the edge in their daring confrontation. (Quick Time Event while crashing through the window)

Shocked and unsettled, Levi and Rohit exchanged wary glances, the brutal self-destruction leaving them with more questions than answers.
   They quickly gathered the essential components from the remains, keeping an eye out for any signs of backup. Without another word, they headed back to Anya's hideout, haunted by the Shadows' ruthless loyalty—and the unseen power that had commanded it.

Level 4

Cutscene:

1. In the dim glow of her den, Anya worked swiftly, assembling the retrieved Shadow tech into stealth enhancements for Levi and Rohit's suits. The upgraded suits shimmered faintly, blending seamlessly with the shadows as they moved. She glanced at them, a hint of worry crossing her face. "This might be a trap," she warned, her voice low. "Going in could be risky."
   Levi's expression hardened. "We don't have any other choice," he replied, resolute.
   With their mission clear and the night as their ally, Levi and Rohit moved out, cloaked in Anya's tech. Under the cover of darkness, they slipped past the penthouse security, moving with silent precision toward their mysterious target.
2. The scene shifts, darkness swallowing the den's warm glow, replaced by the sleek, towering penthouse building looming against Synth-City's glittering skyline. Levi and Rohit stood at a distance, nearly invisible in their stealth suits, their eyes fixed on the building above.

Their movements were too coordinated, their presence too deliberate. It didn't take long for Levi to realize: he had walked straight into a trap. The Shadows had anticipated his every move, their ambush tightening around him like a noose. Every hallway seemed to lead him deeper into enemy territory. He was no longer just infiltrating the penthouse—he was being hunted.

Level 5

Cutscene:

1. Levi's footsteps echoed in the cold, sterile room filled with humming machinery and blinking lights. As he scanned the space, a figure emerged from the shadows.

   A woman, her long green hair flowing behind her, her pale green skin almost glowing in the dim light. Her emerald eyes locked onto him with a chilling intensity. She moved with the grace of a predator, her cloak swirling around her as she stepped forward.

   "You're too late," she said, her voice smooth but laced with malice. "This was never meant to be an infiltration. The Hornet has been waiting for you."

1. Levi struggled against the restraints, but Mantis, with her swift and calculated movements, was more than a match for him. Her strikes were precise, her tactics flawless, overwhelming him until he had no strength left to fight. His vision blurred, and his body went limp as she captured him.
   When Levi regained consciousness, his head was pounding, and his vision was clouded with confusion. His body was strapped to a cold, metallic machine, the restraints digging into his wrists. A low, eerie hum filled the air. Across from him, a monstrous figure loomed, similarly strapped to a machine, its hulking, deformed body connected to various tubes and wires.
   Mantis stood before him, her expression cold and calculating, her green eyes glinting with satisfaction. She was unfazed by his gaze.
   “You’re awake,” she said with a cruel smirk. “I have plans for you, Levi. Your powers… they will be mine.”
   She stepped aside, revealing the monstrous figure. “I’ll siphon your powers and transfer them into the almighty, with your powers and his strength he will become unstoppable."
   Levi’s heart raced as he realized the gravity of the situation. His only hope now was to break free before Mantis could carry out her twisted plan.

Level 6

Cutscene:

1. The scene shifts, and we’re back to where Levi and Rohit were separated. Rohit, focused and determined, was working furiously to hack into the security door. The moment the door shut behind Levi, sealing him off from the rest of the building, Rohit’s attention snapped to the guards around him. Without hesitation, he dove into action, ducking behind a corner as a group of Shadow members moved past, their weapons at the ready.

Rohit knew he had to find another way to reach Levi. He couldn't afford to waste time on stealth now; the mission had turned into a race against time. Moving swiftly, he pushed through the shadows, taking down any guards in his path. His legs moved like lightning, enhanced by his cybernetic implants, letting him dash across the floor with ease.

The air crackled with energy, and the monstrous figure in front of him seemed to stir, ready to receive his powers. Levi could feel his life force being pulled, his strength slowly draining away as the machine began its dark work.

   Mantis grinned, watching him with cold satisfaction. "You won't escape this time, Levi."

   Just as the final sequence began, a loud crash echoed through the room. The door to the chamber exploded open, and in the midst of the chaos, Rohit appeared, moving like a blur. He sprinted across the room, his movements precise, fueled by desperation.

   With a powerful swing, Rohit launched a surge of energy into the machine, his cybernetic-enhanced strength crashing into the control panel. Sparks flew, and the machine groaned as its systems malfunctioned. The humming stopped abruptly, the energy flowing out of it like a dying ember.

   Mantis snarled in frustration, but it was too late. The machine was destroyed, the transfer halted. Levi felt a rush of relief as the draining sensation subsided, his life force returning to him.

   Rohit's voice cut through the silence, breathless but determined. "You're not taking him."
2. As the machine malfunctioned, the monstrous figure on the other side of the room, enraged, tore through its restraints. The machinery crumbled under its raw strength, and sparks flew in all directions.

Mantis, panic evident in her eyes, tried to calm the figure. "No, stop! We can find another way!" she pleaded, her voice shaking. "Please, just give me a moment—"

But the figure—now revealed as the Hornet—ignored her entirely. With a flick of his left hand, he consumed her life force. Mantis' scream was cut short as she crumpled to the floor, her essence drained by the monstrous creature before her.

Turning his attention to Levi and Rohit, the Hornet's eyes burned with fury. With terrifying speed, he launched a powerful punch that sent both men flying. The force of the blow shattered the walls around them, sending them hurtling through the broken penthouse and out into the cool, early morning air.

As the first light of dawn began to creep over the horizon, Levi and Rohit crashed into the empty streets below, their bodies slamming against the concrete with a sickening impact. The peaceful quiet of the morning was shattered by the sound of their fall, the world around them still and calm, in stark contrast to the chaos that had just unfolded.

The Hornet stood in the wreckage, towering above them, his monstrous presence casting a long shadow over the broken cityscape as the new day began to rise.

Chapter 4 (The Final Battle)

Level 1

Cutscene:

1. The Hornet landed with a terrifying crash on the streets below, his hulking form casting a dark shadow over Levi and Rohit. As he stood tall, a cold smile spread across his face. "I've waited eons for a Guardian," he sneered. "You were supposed to kill the Scorpion, to unleash your full power. But this little brat ruined everything. Now, I'll reclaim the powers that were once mine, and I'll use them to achieve ultimate destruction."

   With a sickeningly casual gesture, the Hornet reached out to a random civilian nearby, his hand gripping the person's head. In an instant, he consumed their life force. The victim's body collapsed lifelessly to the ground, but the Hornet's form seemed to shift. His once-decayed features were now rejuvenated—his skin became tighter, his muscles fuller, and his eyes more alive. His strength was amplified, and he looked years younger, his decaying body now restored.

   Levi's stomach turned as he realized the truth: the Hornet wasn't just a monstrous being. He was a dying man, desperate to regain immortality by absorbing others' powers, and Levi's abilities were the key to his salvation.

Without warning, the Hornet dashed forward, his speed unnervingly quick. In the blink of an eye, he was right in front of Levi, his hand reaching for him.
But Rohit acted on instinct, throwing himself in the way. "No!" he shouted as he positioned himself between Levi and the Hornet.
In a split second, Rohit's hand was caught in the Hornet's grasp. The pressure was immense, and it looked like the Hornet was about to consume him. But with a grim determination, Rohit severed his own hand with a swift, brutal motion. The severed limb fell to the ground, blood spilling onto the pavement, but it was enough. Rohit pushed the Hornet away, buying Levi precious moments.

Visual Style

The game's visual style is gritty, realistic, and designed to immerse players in a dystopian world that feels both hauntingly familiar and eerily fantastical. Drawing inspiration from real-world urban decay, each environment is textured with detailed grime, rust, and weathering to reflect a setting that's been ravaged by conflict and cybernetic advancement. The landscapes are moody, with high contrast between shadows and light, creating a sense of danger lurking in every dark alley or abandoned structure.

Character Design:

The characters are rendered with a photorealistic approach, with intricate details in their clothing, armor, and cybernetic enhancements. Each character's design reflects a blend of futuristic technology and dark fantasy, with cybernetic implants seamlessly integrated with organic elements. Skin textures, scars, and intricate metallic augmentations give each character a sense of history and hardship, making them feel tangible and grounded in reality. Fantasy elements, like Hornet's grotesque arm, or Mantis's insect-inspired limbs, are intricately detailed and rendered to feel tangible yet unsettling.

Combat and Hack-and-Slash Elements:

Combat sequences are visceral, focusing on close-range, brutal melee attacks that are enhanced by the characters' cybernetic abilities. Movement is fluid, with hack-and-slash mechanics that feel weighty and impactful. Players can feel the tension in each strike as sparks fly off cybernetic limbs clashing with metal, and blood spatters across surfaces with gritty realism.

Special abilities incorporate a mix of energy-based effects, like Viper's venomous strikes, which pulse with an eerie, almost magical glow. Fantasy elements are intertwined with the real; for instance, magical effects may look more like technological auras, where power manifests as digital glitches or particle distortions. This creates a unique mix that feels like dark tech-fantasy.

Environment and Atmosphere:

The game world is set in a highly advanced civilization, with gleaming cities full of cutting-edge technology, neon lights, and towering skyscrapers. However, scattered across the landscape are forgotten ruins—abandoned areas overtaken by nature, rusting machinery, and faded tech. These forgotten zones contrast sharply with the vibrant, futuristic cities, creating a haunting atmosphere of lost history. While the urban centers hum with life, the ruins are steeped in mystery, with broken roads and crumbling structures, bathed in dim, eerie lighting. The environment blends high-tech and decaying remnants, evoking both progress and loss.

Audio-Visual Effects:

The soundscape includes haunting echoes, mechanical whirs, and electric hums, enhancing the realism of each scene. In battle, sound effects are crisp and impactful, with a visceral clash of metal on metal, explosions, and guttural enemy growls. Effects like Hornet's corrupted arm would be accompanied by a chilling, liquid sound as he absorbs energy, while Mantis's movements might be accompanied by a faint, insect-like clicking.

Overall Visual Style:

This visual style combines high-resolution realism with fantasy-inspired enhancements, emphasizing the monstrous nature of villains and the heroism of the protagonists. The world feels brutal and unforgiving, but there's a haunting beauty in its decay and the cyber-fantasy elements. Together, these features create an experience that feels dark, tangible, and uniquely immersive—drawing players into a world that's as intriguing as it is dangerous.
